

Katherine Herold

Century College

23 March 2022

Recommended Open Educational Resource (OER) for General Psychology

1. Various Authors. Noba Project

<https://nobaproject.com/>

The Noba project consists of various modules, all of which are written by experts in the field. These modules cover topics from a standard General Psychology textbook. Instructors can use the website to build a custom textbook that both follows college curriculum and incorporates interesting and new topics that often aren't included in standard general psychology books. Once created, the book can be shared as a link or downloaded as a PDF. The writing style of the modules is generally clear and direct, and there is consistency in writing style among the modules. There are several helpful tables, figures and photographs in each chapter that will facilitate student engagement with the material, and the difficulty level of the writing is just right for an introductory course. In addition, each module comes with supplementary materials such as student quizzes, review sheets, written questions, and power point slides. I am adopting a custom-made Noba textbook in my Fall 2022 General Psychology class.